

MATT and NIKKI BROWN

missionaries to CAMBODIA

December 3, 2012

Dear Praying Friends:

As we approach the end of 2012, it is good to remember the goodness of God. This has been a very exciting year for us with many important milestones - ordination, beginning deputation in March, then travelling over 20,000 miles to be in so many wonderful churches! The kind friends, prayer warriors, and supporters we have met in the past year have been such an encouragement in this journey.

November Travels

We spent November in churches in North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. Our new arrival is definitely making his presence known to his mother, so I made several of these trips by myself. Travelling solo gave me a renewed appreciation for my most important ministry partner!

Please pray for the health and safety of both Nikki and the new baby.

Our conferences and meetings this past month were a great blessing. We were able to teach both children and adults, preach, and share our burden with many. Another great blessing was being able to spend Thanksgiving with our family.

Christmas and Cambodia

Christmas is quickly approaching us. At first glance, it doesn't seem to have a lot to do with Cambodia - no snow, no Christmas trees, no gifts. When we consider the nature of Jesus' arrival on earth, however, we realize that He is our greatest missionary example. He was willing to enter an unfamiliar environment for the sake of the Father and for the salvation of souls. Most Cambodians don't have Christmas because they don't have Christ. All of us have the calling to follow in Jesus' steps, and we are thankful for those of you who are contributing your resources and prayers to get Christ to the people of Cambodia. God bless you as you celebrate His birth!

In Christ,

Matt and Nikki Brown
