

Taken in Anchorage,
Alaska:
A Grizzly Bear
and a Teddy Bear.

Of Missionaries, Missions, and Mandate in the work of the ministry

Of Missionaries

The Lord allowed me to participate again at the Biblical School of World Evangelism. I spoke for a week to missionaries and missionaries in training on the subject of Developing a Biblical Strategy for Reaching the World with the Gospel. I also taught the missions classes for a week at Ambassador Baptist College.

The future is bright in missions. These two weeks allowed me to meet with many students pondering God's will and direction for them. I also taught in our Annual Candidate School to ten families and two single missionaries as they commence and continue their deputation.

Of Missions

It is my pleasure to work with missionaries as they progress through the phases of getting to the mission field. It is the work in Bible colleges, churches, and direct contact with our mission that I meet and work with the families throughout the application process.

This quarter I attended an interview of World Wide New Testament Baptist Missions newest missionary, Paul Smith, missionary to Ukraine. We will also have two other families joining our missions family in the weeks ahead.

It is thrilling to see people go from coming forward at an invitation in a church service to getting to the mission field. Thank you for supporting me to do this work.

Of our Mandate

The Word of God is clear: we must reach every creature in every place with the news of salvation. I preached in six missions conferences and in other special services about the work of getting the world the Gospel.

One of the conferences where I was privileged to preach was at Bible Baptist Church in Fairbanks, Alaska. I was amazed at God's moving in this church. Fifteen people came forward in submission to do God's will amongst unreached people wherever He would send them.

A global view of our evangelistic efforts reveal clear gaps in the landscape of the Gospel's penetration around the globe. For those who are praying for God's direction in missions, please pray for God to send forth laborers to unreached people groups.

John M. O'Malley